Healthy Immune Support
These days consumers recognize that enhancing and maintaining a healthy immune system is vital for achieving optimum health. The daily factors associated with modern living can significantly weaken the immune system and increase the likelihood of getting sick. These factors include: stress, environmental toxins, increased exposure to viruses and bacteria, poor nutrition, smoking, dieting, and being in close proximity to others such as in classrooms and airplanes. As a result, immune support is no longer a seasonal concern but is, instead, a vital necessity throughout the year. In addition, consumers are increasingly demanding natural ingredients with proven effectiveness. This is especially important in the area of immune support because it is often difficult to “feel” the specific effects of immune-enhancing products since they are used for preventative purposes primarily.

Maitake (Grifola frondosa) is known as an adaptogenic “host defense potentiator”, activating and enhancing the actions of macrophages and other immune cells, all of which are vital to a strong and balanced immune system. Maitake is also recognized as an important cellular protection enhancer.

Researchers at Memorial Sloan Kettering Research Hospital found that MaitakeGold 404® enhanced several indicators of healthy immune function in a multi-phase, U.S. Government funded human clinical trial. Maitake (Grifola frondosa) was chosen exclusively for this project and was assigned an Investigational New Drug (IND) number in association with it. Research at the University of Louisville also has shown that Maitake (Grifola frondosa) provides a high level of immune support particularly in the body’s first line of immune defense, phagocytosis. These studies have been published in peer-reviewed journals.
